Is there any reason not to kill oneself if atheism is true? This life will eventually end, you cannot escape death forever, no one has. Not even the earth, sun, or universe can escape annihilation according to current theories. So why wait? It's likely that you will suffer pain, loss, and disappointment in the future. You may even become disabled such that you are too weak to commit suicide. Why not take advantage now of the ~~gift~~ of annihilation? While you're at it, you could help others to achieve this release. Going on a killing spree could hurt no one truly, there being no afterlife to prepare for and no way of living forever. Just a suggestion. Either way, your choice doesn't matter in the end.